

Subscription prices table: Daily (delivered by carrier) 35 cents per week, Daily, one year $18.00, Daily, six months $10.00, Weekly, one year $5.00, Weekly, six months $3.00, Weekly, three months $1.50

Entered at the Tombstone postoffice as second-class matter.

ORGANIZATION.

The Territorial Democratic Central Committee is thoroughly reorganized and made ready for the fall campaign. As now constituted it is as follows: Pima County, Fred G. Hughes; Cochise County, E. A. Baker; Maricopa County, E. A. Baker; Yavapai County, F. R. Brady; Pinal County, F. R. Brady; Apache County, C. E. Cooley; Yuma County, A. L. Bailey; Gila County, A. L. Bailey; Mohave County, Herman Buchsbaum; Graham County, W. W. Jones, Chairman. A. D. LEXON, of Phoenix, Secretary.

For the Democratic Nomination As Delegate to Congress

The scheme at present in course of perfection by which the Irish landlords, with the aid of a syndicate of heavy capitalists, propose to root the Irish tenantry from the soil of their ancestors and transplant English and Scotch farmers in their place, will not succeed. The plan is not only brutal, but impracticable. The Irish peasant is more attached to his native soil than any other member of the European family. It is this spirit of affection for his native land, that has kept the warm fire of patriotism burning in the Irishman's heart for seven hundred years. An Irishman's interest in Ireland is not wholly because he has property there, but because it is his mother land. With such a spirit, it is impossible to completely conquer the Irish people. Landlord leagues are nothing new; for nearly three hundred years the absentee lords of the Irish soil, were a unit in any scheme whereby tenants could be robbed and laborers plundered. When the new landlord crusade runs against the Land League...

There is a vacancy in the County Republican Central Committee, caused by the departure of one of its members to Alaska. He needed cooling off, after the "monkey and parrot" time inaugurated by the boss hot-house committee men. Nearly all the prominent Republicans of Tombstone are hunting the north pole. Even the illustrious deputy clerk of the District Court is wending his way thitherward, to cool his brow, heated by his wearisome exertions over the acquisition of a modest competence.

The attention of the Democrats of Cochise county is called to the necessity for registering at once. All names must be on the great register twenty days before election, and voters will save much inconvenience by registering at the first opportunity. Whenever business calls a Democrat to the neighborhood of the registering officer, he should register, and not wait until it becomes necessary for him to make a special trip for that purpose. Republicans can stay away altogether if they choose.

The Hon. John C. Fall, of Willcox, is not indignant, as claimed by our contemporary, because the Democratic convention did not send him to Phoenix. There is no better Democrat than Mr. Fall, and no truer gentleman. He was tendered a seat in the Territorial convention, but declined on account of press of business. Falsehood is not logic, neither is it wit.

Republicans are constantly in this office cursing other Republicans. The Epitaph impartially sympathizes with them all, and is particularly well contented when a bad Republican kicks a good one.

Our neighborly neighbor states that the Republican party believes in the "greatest good to the greatest number." It certainly advocates the policy of making the rich richer and the poor poorer.

The Republican high-binders are industriously engaged in placing rings in the noses of the tank and file. The round-up presents the appearance of a Chinese rodeo.

According to our contemporary, all those who attended the Fourth of July meeting, except the stalwart ring, are saloon bummers.

The scheme at present in course of perfection by which the Irish landlords, with the aid of a syndicate of heavy capitalists, propose to root the Irish tenantry from the soil of their ancestors and transplant English and Scotch farmers in their place, will not succeed. The plan is not only brutal, but impracticable. The Irish peasant is more attached to his native soil than any other member of the European family. It is this spirit of affection for his native land, that has kept the warm fire of patriotism burning in the Irishman's heart for seven hundred years. An Irishman's interest in Ireland is not wholly because he has property there, but because it is his mother land. With such a spirit, it is impossible to completely conquer the Irish people. Landlord leagues are nothing new; for nearly three hundred years the absentee lords of the Irish soil, were a unit in any scheme whereby tenants could be robbed and laborers plundered. When the new landlord crusade runs against the Land League...

Objection is being taken to the employment of Chinese upon the new court house. It seems that a sub-contractor is the employer, and he claims he cannot find white men to do the work. Certainly, it is strange that the erection of a public building should constitute the only occasion making the employment of Chinese a necessity. Upon none of the many private buildings now being built are they engaged. The four Chinamen laboring for the contractor are used in the manufacture of brick. We suggest that white men desiring employment present themselves in an offer to relieve the imported labor, and thus leave no excuse for its retention. The Epitaph is heartily opposed to Chinese labor, when made competitive with white labor, and its columns are always open for condemnation of the employment of the former.

It is a sad commentary upon republican institutions, when it is urged that a Territory must send a Delegate of the same political complexion as the administration, or recognition will be refused. Yet such a proposition is seriously advanced by the Republican press of Arizona. One would naturally believe that the great Congress of the United States, the members of which are supposed to serve only the best interests of the people, would be actuated only by motives of justice in listening to the demands of any section of this republic.

The Democratic party believes in free labor, and advocates its protection. The creed of the Republican party favors the rich at the expense of the poor, and advocates the importation of Coolie labor in the interest of the former, without regard to its distressing effect upon the latter. Republicans openly assert that white laborers are to be driven to their support, whether they will or no. Democrats have faith in the independence of free labor, and appeal only to the reason and intelligence of laborers.

The letter of Geo. Hearst, published in the Examiner, gives forth no uncertain sound. He announces plainly and emphatically that he will work as hard for the successful candidate as if he was himself the nominee. That is the kind of timber true Democrats are made of.

The blackmail demanded of government employees by the Republican Congressional campaign committee is meeting with few favorable responses. The civil service reform association has stiffened the backbone of the officials and they refuse to contribute to the corruption fund.

The present burden of excessive taxation should be taken off the mining property of the Territory. Taxation should only meet the requirements of revenue, and be equal.

Daniel H. Pinney, the new Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Arizona, is a Democrat. It is needless to say his appointment was unsolicited.

TELEGRAPHIC.

GUITEAU GONE!

The Arch Assassin Swung into Eternity.

Denounces Arthur and Corchill and Dies Game.

Graphic Account of the Scenes and Incidents of the Execution.

DETAILS OF THE HANGING

(Special Dispatch to the Epitaph.) WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30.—The morning opened bright and clear, and the unusual crowds thronging Pennsylvania avenue was proof positive that something of unusual importance was about to occur. The morning trains from Baltimore and Richmond brought thousands to the city; and about 8:30 a special train arrived from the east, carrying the assassin, Charles J. Guiteau, and his spiritual adviser, the Rev. Dr. Hicks. Only a few officials and newspaper correspondents being present. Dr. Hicks asked him if he was ready to meet his God. He said he was; that he was a chosen child of his Creator and dreaded not His presence. He was asked if he forgave his enemies, and did not answer. He stood for awhile in evident study and answered slowly, that there was some men in the world whom he could not forgive. He said he thought Colonel Corchill bartered away his life to retain the position of District Attorney of the District of Columbia, and Arthur, whom he made President, had not manhood enough to brave the storm of demagogues and pardon him. He was then told to prepare for death, and placed on the trap by a deputy marshal. Dr. Hicks again began to pray, and Guiteau followed him silently. When the clergyman finished, Guiteau raised his voice in prayer, and continued for some time. He implored God to retain a place for him in Heaven. Reminded the Lord that he obeyed His mandate and asked for his reward.

THE TRAP SPRUNG. His hands were then bound behind his back, and the black cap about to be put on, when he asked for a moment's grace to bid adieu to the guards. He nodded to them all pleasantly, except McCall, who made the attack on him in his cell before the trial. He thanked them for their kindness and told the executioner to proceed. The cap was then pulled down over his eyes, only the lower part of the face remaining visible. He attempted to sing his newly composed poem but broke down before completing the first stanza. At that moment somebody outside have signalled to the crowd outside the jail that the last moment had arrived, for a shout rent the air, as if proceeding from a thousand throats, and it was repeated time and again, until the Potomac flats gave back the sound. The poor wretch commenced to tremble violently; his whole frame shook, his knees knocked in agony, the trap, in mercy, was sprung, and the assassin of Garfield was ushered into eternity amid the joyous shouts of his countrymen.

THE ASSASSIN spent a troubled night, and did not go to sleep until about four in the morning. He spent the night apparently in contemplation and prayer. When he awoke in the morning, his spiritual adviser, Dr. Hicks, was at his side. They held a long consultation and prayed together. Hicks is the only man with whom Guiteau had frequent intercourse since the assassination with whom he did not quarrel. He made Hicks the legate of his body, with certain conditions, the principal of which was that it should not be used for mercenary purposes.

MRS. SCOVILLE, His poor, heart-broken sister, whose devotion to his cause should endure her to humanity the world over, made application at the jail gate about 11 a. m. for permission to enter. Warden Crocker, anticipating a scene, gave instructions that she should not be admitted. She pleaded piteously with the guards, but they were inexorable. She cried, wrung her hands, and tore her hair and seemed like one entirely devoid of reason. Her screams were piteous, and wrung compassion from the hearts of the multitude who witnessed her sorrow, though they could enjoy beholding her brother undergoing a torturing death. Her screams were piteous and were continued for fifteen minutes. She then raged and called down the curses of God upon the officials that denied her a parting with her brother. She was finally admitted inside the gate and Guiteau sent for. He pacified her and an affecting farewell took place. The assassin was stolid, but blessed her as they parted.

THE LAST HOUR. The time of the execution was fixed by Marshal Henry at fifteen minutes to one. About noon Guiteau began to feel uneasy, but was borne up by his spiritual adviser, aided by his intense egotism. He was very anxious to have the gallows arrangements perfect, and kept asking about the different details continuously. He sent Dr. Hicks to examine the scaffold, test the trap, and try the noose. The doctor's report was favorable, and he seemed satisfied. He denounced what he termed, Arthur's treachery in unmeasured terms, said he made Arthur, and that he should not forget him in this hour of dire necessity. He warned Hicks whom he termed his literary executor, to be careful and eliminate from his works anything that had a tendency to glorify Arthur's administration. He said he was not sorry that he removed Garfield from earthly scenes. Ordinary people might think that the country could escape over the chasm he was preparing, but his vision had been extended by God, and he knew different. He said he was at peace with God and mankind, and feared not death. He would like to live, not so much from the pleasure of living, but he would like to instruct his countrymen religiously and politically. His entire nervous system was strung up to bear the ordeal. He looked pale and haggard, and said his countrymen would one day raise monuments to his memory.

THE LAST MOMENTS. When the awful moment approached, the death warrant was read to him, and he was ordered to prepare for the last scene of his earthly career. He shuddered at the announcement, but retired to the cell without a murmur. He was accompanied by a sombre suit of black, the coat tightly fitting and buttoned within six inches of the chin. He wore a rosette on the left lapel of his coat and had on an immaculate pair of white gloves. He wore a soft slouch hat, indented in the center and protruding low over his forehead. Two marshals' deputies walked in front of him and two behind. Dr. Hicks walked at his side. He walked steadily and unflinchingly to the gallows, and cast an eager glance at the instrument of execution when he reached it. He stood on the trap and tapped it with his heel; examined the noose carefully and tugged at the rope to test its strength of fastening. He then faced around, folded his arms and began to gaze with his spiritual adviser. The executioner was practically private.

Only a few officials and newspaper correspondents being present. Dr. Hicks asked him if he was ready to meet his God. He said he was; that he was a chosen child of his Creator and dreaded not His presence. He was asked if he forgave his enemies, and did not answer. He stood for awhile in evident study and answered slowly, that there was some men in the world whom he could not forgive. He said he thought Colonel Corchill bartered away his life to retain the position of District Attorney of the District of Columbia, and Arthur, whom he made President, had not manhood enough to brave the storm of demagogues and pardon him. He was then told to prepare for death, and placed on the trap by a deputy marshal. Dr. Hicks again began to pray, and Guiteau followed him silently. When the clergyman finished, Guiteau raised his voice in prayer, and continued for some time. He implored God to retain a place for him in Heaven. Reminded the Lord that he obeyed His mandate and asked for his reward.

THE TRAP SPRUNG. His hands were then bound behind his back, and the black cap about to be put on, when he asked for a moment's grace to bid adieu to the guards. He nodded to them all pleasantly, except McCall, who made the attack on him in his cell before the trial. He thanked them for their kindness and told the executioner to proceed. The cap was then pulled down over his eyes, only the lower part of the face remaining visible. He attempted to sing his newly composed poem but broke down before completing the first stanza. At that moment somebody outside have signalled to the crowd outside the jail that the last moment had arrived, for a shout rent the air, as if proceeding from a thousand throats, and it was repeated time and again, until the Potomac flats gave back the sound. The poor wretch commenced to tremble violently; his whole frame shook, his knees knocked in agony, the trap, in mercy, was sprung, and the assassin of Garfield was ushered into eternity amid the joyous shouts of his countrymen.

THE ASSASSIN spent a troubled night, and did not go to sleep until about four in the morning. He spent the night apparently in contemplation and prayer. When he awoke in the morning, his spiritual adviser, Dr. Hicks, was at his side. They held a long consultation and prayed together. Hicks is the only man with whom Guiteau had frequent intercourse since the assassination with whom he did not quarrel. He made Hicks the legate of his body, with certain conditions, the principal of which was that it should not be used for mercenary purposes.

MRS. SCOVILLE, His poor, heart-broken sister, whose devotion to his cause should endure her to humanity the world over, made application at the jail gate about 11 a. m. for permission to enter. Warden Crocker, anticipating a scene, gave instructions that she should not be admitted. She pleaded piteously with the guards, but they were inexorable. She cried, wrung her hands, and tore her hair and seemed like one entirely devoid of reason. Her screams were piteous, and wrung compassion from the hearts of the multitude who witnessed her sorrow, though they could enjoy beholding her brother undergoing a torturing death. Her screams were piteous and were continued for fifteen minutes. She then raged and called down the curses of God upon the officials that denied her a parting with her brother. She was finally admitted inside the gate and Guiteau sent for. He pacified her and an affecting farewell took place. The assassin was stolid, but blessed her as they parted.

THE LAST HOUR. The time of the execution was fixed by Marshal Henry at fifteen minutes to one. About noon Guiteau began to feel uneasy, but was borne up by his spiritual adviser, aided by his intense egotism. He was very anxious to have the gallows arrangements perfect, and kept asking about the different details continuously. He sent Dr. Hicks to examine the scaffold, test the trap, and try the noose. The doctor's report was favorable, and he seemed satisfied. He denounced what he termed, Arthur's treachery in unmeasured terms, said he made Arthur, and that he should not forget him in this hour of dire necessity. He warned Hicks whom he termed his literary executor, to be careful and eliminate from his works anything that had a tendency to glorify Arthur's administration. He said he was not sorry that he removed Garfield from earthly scenes. Ordinary people might think that the country could escape over the chasm he was preparing, but his vision had been extended by God, and he knew different. He said he was at peace with God and mankind, and feared not death. He would like to live, not so and exercised for fifteen minutes. He walked very briskly and made it rather difficult for the guards to keep up with him.

GIVES HIS BODY TO HICKS. A letter in the nature of a will in which Guiteau disposes of his body is as follows: Washington, D. C., June 29, 1882. To Rev. Wm. A. Hicks:—I, Charles J. Guiteau, of the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, now under sentence of death, which is to be carried into execution between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock on the 30th day of June, A. D., in the United States Jail, in said District, do hereby give and grant you my body after such execution, provided, however, it shall not be used for any mercenary purposes, and I hereby, for good and sufficient consideration, give, deliver and transfer to said Hicks, my book entitled "The Truth and Removal," and copyright thereof, to be used by him in writing a truthful history of my life, and execution, and I direct that such history be entitled "The Life and Work of Chas. S. Guiteau," and I hereby solemnly proclaim and announce to all the world that no person or persons shall ever, in any manner, use my body for any mercenary purpose, whatsoever, and, if at any time hereafter any person should wish to honor my remains they can do it by erecting a monument whereon shall be inscribed these words: "Here lies the body of Chas. J. Guiteau, patriot and Christian; his soul is in glory." (Signed) CHAS. J. GUITEAU. CHAS. H. REED, JAMES WOODWARD.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Guiteau was hanged at seven minutes of one.

SALT LAKE, June 28.—Mary Ann Angell Young, wife of the late prophet, Brigham Young, died here last night. Fifteen more sorrowing widows remain to follow him. A singular suicide occurred in Salt Lake last night. A discharged soldier, by the name of John English, after adjusting a skunk trap around his neck in an unoccupied building, fastened the chain to one of the rafters and then let himself down. When discovered a few minutes afterwards, the trap had caught his life.

There is a meeting of old folks in Salt Lake gathered here from all parts of the Territory. There are 1120 of them over 80 years of age. The oldest in the gathering is 103. They all attended the Salt Lake theatre this afternoon.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The House Committee on Elections decided to give the seat now occupied by Tillman of South Carolina to Small.

THE CONTANTIN IN THE ALABAMA case of Strebach against Herbert requested to be dismissed, with leave to withdraw papers without prejudice.

SENATE.—The recommendation of the Secretary of War for an appropriation of $205,000 for the erection of barracks, etc., in Arizona was referred.

THE INTERNAL REVENUE bill passed the House.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 29.—Today's Republican Convention was attended by the entire 792 delegates, making the largest Republican Convention ever held in the state. Senator George Hunt was made temporary chairman. The usual committees were appointed, and the convention took a recess until two o'clock.

CHICAGO, June 28.—A Decatur, Ill. special says: The fourteenth district congressional Republican convention nominated J. H. Rowell, of Bloomington.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The day is bright and the attendance is good and the betting heavy. First race, flash stakes for two year old colts, five furlongs. Barnes and Ascender made running, rest bunched and with varying success. Ascender and Barnes strove for the front. The former won by half a length, Barnes second, three lengths before Pearl Thorn, third; Gano fourth. Time 1:3.

Second race: Selling purse, 1 1/2 miles, all ages—Flonders winning by a half length; Barlow 2d; Churchill 3d; Barney 4th. Time 1:51 1/2. The winner was bought in by the present owner for $50,000.

Third race—For Greenstake, three year old that have not won before January 1st, 1/2 mile.—Plunkett won; Gunner 2d; Gilman, 3d; Glenarm, 4th. Time 21 1/2.

Fourth race—All ages, 3/4 mile heats—1st heat Mammonist, favorite; 100 to 35 on Pride; field 25. Belle Bay took the track and was never headed; Mammonist 2d; Goodnight 3d. Time 1:04. This race was run in a driving rain at the second heat. The track was deep in mud and water. Mammie won in gallop. Time 1:08. Third heat, Mammie 100 to 100, Bell Bay 30; Mammie won in gallop. Time 1:11.

THE WRECKED CREW. SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—The captain and crew of the British ship Lammermoor, wrecked on Badaga reef, arrived in town to-day. The captain refuses to make a statement regarding the disaster. From members of the crew it is learned that the ship at the time she struck was booming along under full sail and leading wind; also stated that there was no lookout on duty at the time. Three boats were launched, and all hands were taken to the schooner, which was lying at a short distance, waiting to render assistance. The ship and cargo were auctioned this afternoon at nominal figures.

SAN FRANCISCO stock exchange today decided to adjourn from Friday afternoon to Wednesday morning.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The House took up the bill to regulate immigration, and passed it as agreed upon by the committee on commerce. The bill to reduce the internal revenue taxes was taken up. The House by a vote of 125 to 60, refused to recommend internal revenue bills with instructions to the ways and means committee to report the abolition of all internal revenue taxes except on bank circulation and distilled spirits.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The freight handlers' strike still continues peaceful but stubborn. Steamboat lines are doing a rushing business, but rail freight is absolutely stagnant since the condition of affairs that has prevailed in Jersey City, though some freight is being moved west with the aid of clerks and office boys. The Pennsylvania railroad company has more men than all the rest combined, and they experience very little delay.

DES MOINES, June 28.—The prohibition election proceedings passed off quietly. Vote comparatively small. Anti-Prohibitionists claim the election by 8,000. The prohibitionists think the amendment will receive 30,000 majority. Ladies are active at the polls. Money seems, however to be on the other side, and is lavishly used.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 28.—Senator Cox has stated he will accept the nomination of the Democratic convention for Governor if tendered him. The announcement has made considerable stir, and it is stated that if nominated a suit will be brought to test his eligibility as he publicly said that he violated the election law which disqualifies him for holding office.

LEWISTON, Me., June 28.—The Democratic State Convention nominated Harris M. Plaisted for Governor.

LEWISTON, Me., June 27.—The Democratic convention to-day made the following nomination for congressional candidates: Samuel J. Jordon, First District; Daniel H. Thing, Second District; Geo. W. Ladd, Third District; F. Murch Fourth District; J. H. Reems, Fifth District. The convention then adjourned.

DELINQUENT NOTICE. MONTGOMERY CONSOLIDATED GOLD AND SILVER MINING COMPANY. Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Tombstone, Cochise county, Arizona Territory.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

Table of delinquent shareholders with columns for Name, No., Shares, Amt. Due, and Paid.

PACIFIC COAST WORKS. 1850 — 1882 RANKIN, BRAYTON & CO., 127 First St., San Francisco, Cal. BUILDERS OF Mining Machinery. PLANTS FOR GOLD AND SILVER MILLS.